

Wilderness House Literary Review 10/2

Edny Modestin
Just For You

Like a dream cast
On the daylight
Of the earth,
Our paths crossed and met.
Just when I thought I had seen it all,
Like music sent by the night wind,
Where all vivid things awoke
To bring joy to a sad heart
And blossom in the mind.
I knew you would be the light of my darkness
And the preciousness of my everyday life.
At the first glance when I saw your face.
You were amazing and full of grace
Ever since, my heart can't stop beating, just for you...
Oh! Sweet lady, just for you...

Wilderness House Literary Review 10/2

Startling Adventure

The woods that burn on site
Make flickering light
To brighten our dark alley
And ease the madness that floods the valley.

Why do you have to be so far?
When you are the golden jar.
Why do we have to be so different?
When our harmonious link is so apparent.

The smooth breeze that fills the atmosphere,
Takes us to a mysterious land and an unrevealed sphere.
There, we were what we had ever dreamed of
In the woods, like friendly doves, free from all.

The rhythm of your hands that dance in the dark,
Cripple, tremble my members and create a feedback
On the sound of the creatures of the night that croon in the park
Hmmm! This new episode full of erotic gesture
Is one of a kind that gleams this unexpected adventure

Wilderness House Literary Review 10/2

Freedom-Mind

I wish I could float away with the breeze,
As a hawk flies above those trees,
And be only where I wanted to be
Where mankind can never be.

I may look for unseen on the opposite hill,
As scales the Mozart symphony,
As the kite cuddle the wind on harmony,
And seeing the one I perhaps may desire still;

May I, be grateful to run away,
With no rules to follow this pattern someday,
And stop, wherever a little,
Till I find an open land to settle.

I said, but just a bit of freedom soon,
To reason the mind of thy dusky-afternoon-