

Wilderness House Literary Review 14/3

nate maxson

Borges Prays In Darkness

And the white winter sun/ may the noise never come

May the days/ rattle on like surgical blood in a glass container

May the autoclave of my hours/ sing to a brightness while I wander

Blind at last like the light finally found me