

Found Art

Oddly enough we don't get thousands of invitations to gallery openings. It's probably because we don't spend a lot of money on new art. Our walls are already covered and the battle for wall space between books and art has been put on hold while we try to think of where to put the stacks of books on the floor and the newly framed art that leans against them. We still love new art so here's a representative sample:

We attended an opening for one of our favorite galleries in Cambridge, the Out of the Blue. The artists name was Robert M. Sarly and the opening was held at a restaurant. The huge mirrors on the wall gave a surreal feeling to the opening.

Self portrait with art - Steve Glines

There is a trend among artists trying to appeal to interior decorators to stage shows in peoples homes. It's a great idea except few people I know have such well appointed homes as those staged by designers. There is a museum ambiance in such shows. I've always enjoyed these transient, one-day, shows. Alexandria Sheldon staged just one of these shows in a well-appointed townhouse in Watertown Massachusetts. We were envious of the vertical wall space.

"Strawberry milk" 6" x 12" 2006

"Bleeding Heart" 15" x 18" 2007

"Pouring Milk" 6" x 12" 2007