

Wilderness House Literary Review 7/1

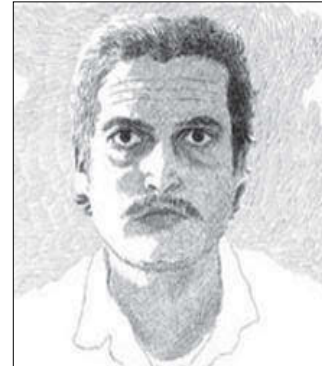

The art of D.L. Polonsky

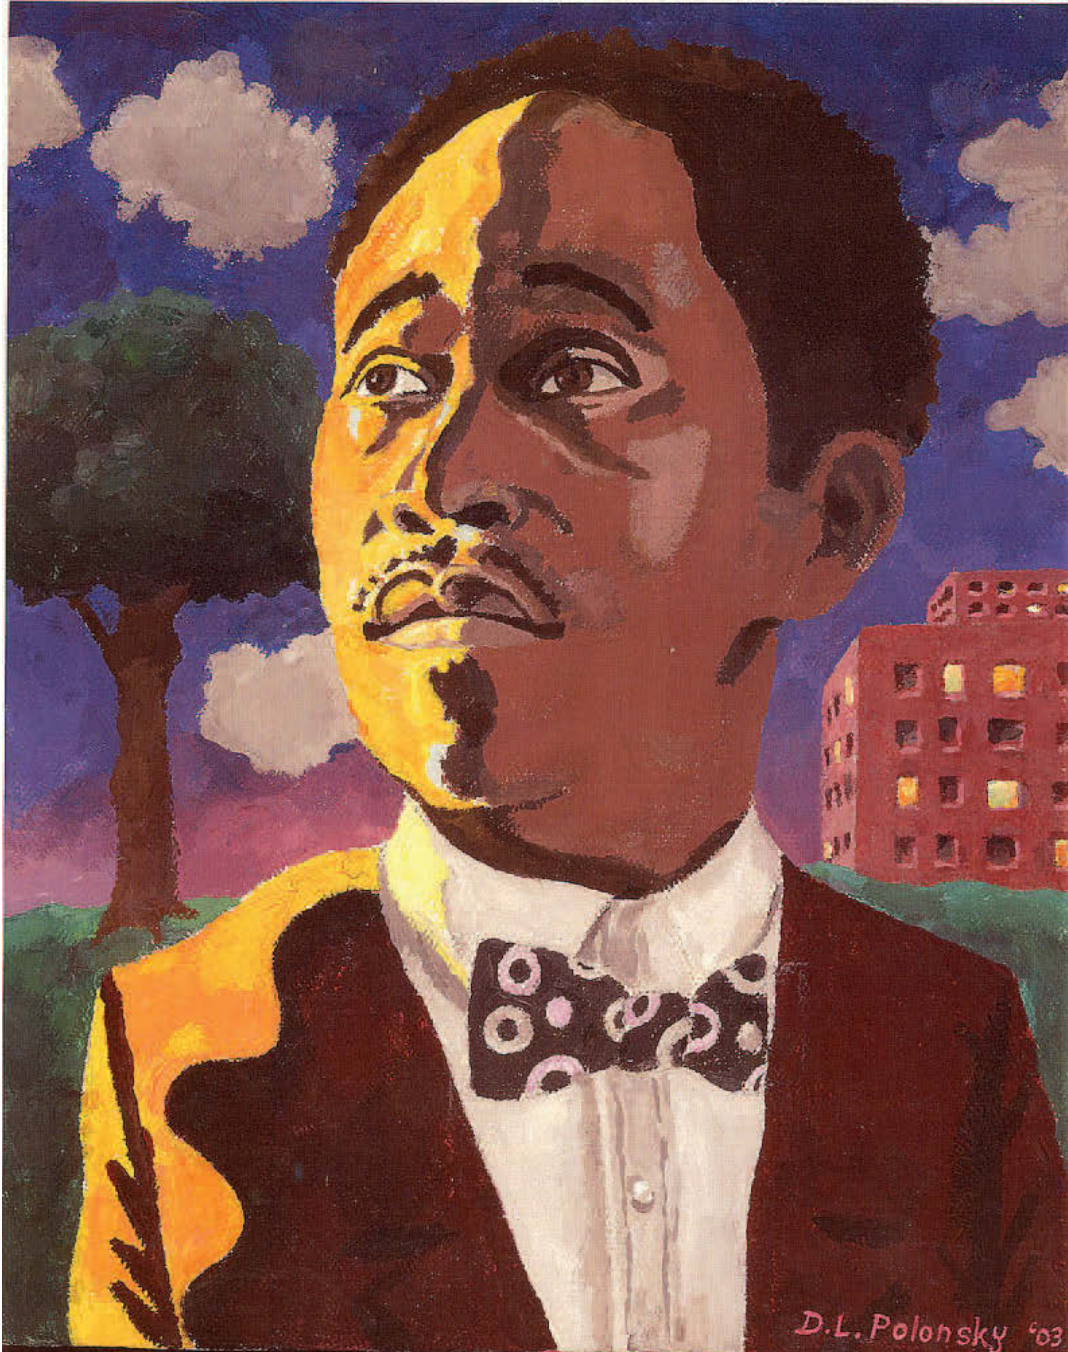

My name is D.L. Polonsky and I'm an artist, author and filmmaker. I was born on November 3rd, 1960. I grew up in Newton, Massachusetts and have lived in Allston since April, 2000. Both my parents and my younger brother are artists, so I've been immersed in the arts most of my life. I've been drawing and painting since I was four.

I've made several dozen short films using the resources of public access TV stations. My autobiographical short film "Blid" won "Most Innovative Video in the Country by a Non-Professional" in the Hometown Video Contest, a national film contest.

As far as drawing and illustrating goes, I've had a children's book published in 1992 that I both wrote and illustrated titled "The Letter Bandits". It's about a thief who steals letters of the alphabet, thereby transforming the objects themselves. Example: "The Letter Bandit stole the T from STUTTGART, transforming it into an enormous pile of SUGAR". Most of these transformations are illustrated. The book had 5 reviews, all favorable, one rave. It's still being sold.

I've had political cartoons on the editorial pages of dozens of major papers and magazines. Most notably, I had 9 in The Boston Globe from 1986-2000 and 80 in The Boston Herald from 2004-2010.

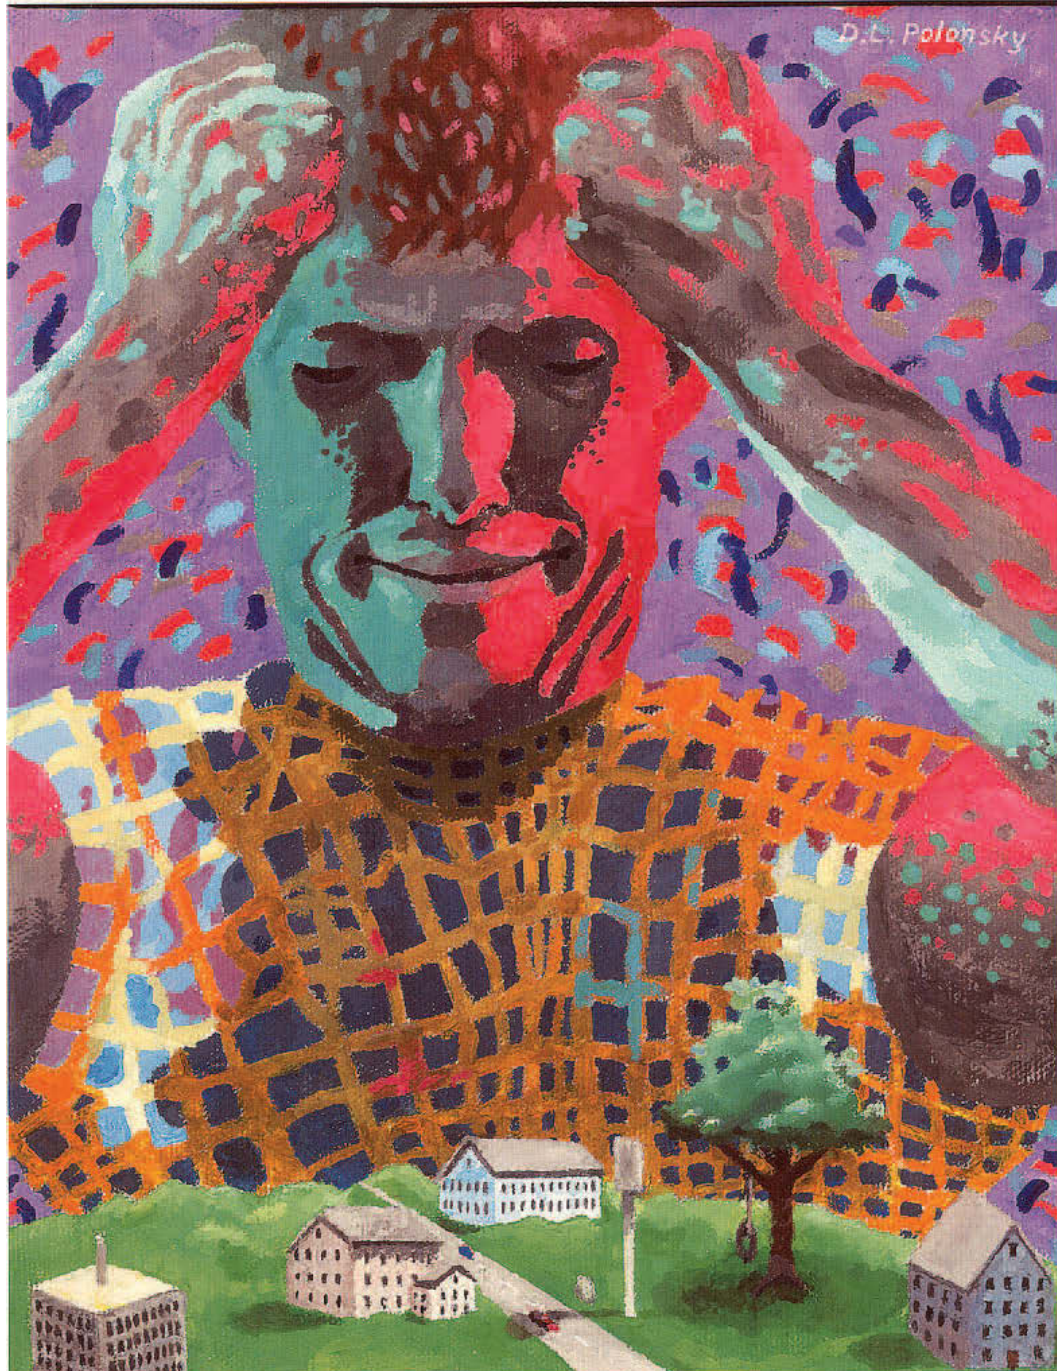

"Man with Bow Tie"

© 2003, by D.L. Polonsky.

Gouache on canvas

"Superego"

© 2004, by D.L. Polonsky.

Gouache on canvas.

"At the Edge of the River"
by D.L. Polonsky, © 2008
Gouache on canvas.

“Mother and Child 2010”
by D.L. Polonsky, ©2010
Colored pencil on Bristol board.

“Outside Kelly’s Roast Beef, Allston, Mass.”

by D.L. Polonsky, © 2010

Colored pencil on Bristol board.

"Skydream"

© 2012, by D.L. Polonsky.

Pen, colored pencil & Photoshop.